

Consensual Enslavement Contract I

One of the persistent structures of MASTER / slave relationships is the contract of slavery. All of us have read different versions of these documents over the years. Many of the same themes and ideas about MASTER / slave behaviour seem to crop up in these treatises. To me that says something about the durability and commonality of our shared vision.

Behavioural Specifications for slave #xxxxxxx

An agreement to be in place until terminated as allowed for within the document or superseded by a subsequent agreement

The MASTER or HIS designee, temporarily appointed to control slave by MASTER, shall be referred to as controlling party for the remainder of this document. A reference to MASTER is meant to refer to that specific individual.
- When not under direct control, all general rules of behaviour outlined in this document, with the noted exceptions, fully apply.
- The MASTER has the right to punish slave at any time for any infraction or merely for personal pleasure. MASTER may allow others this right as well. Though, the health and well being of slave will always be considered and will remain the responsibility of the MASTER.

- When under direct control and not being used by controlling party, doing assigned chores, or necessary work related tasks, slave will ask the controlling party if it can be of use. If not, slave will return to a defined slave storage area and quietly await further instructions. If none is defined, slave may ask where to wait by saying, "Where may it wait your next command, SIR?"
- slave may ask for permission to speak freely at any time. This does not remove the standard of deference and respect expected from slave.
